Learning to live without tobacco.

Free cessation classes help participants become smoke-free.

All MedStar Health facilities are tobacco free.

Thank you for not smoking.

Letter from the President.

MedStar Health has long been dedicated to ensuring that our hospitals' patient populations and local communities have access to the resources they need to live long and healthy lives. This publication, Advancing Health, was launched earlier this year to create greater awareness of some of the many ways we are working to achieve this goal.

In this issue, we focus on several of these initiatives. You'll read about our efforts to help people go tobacco-free. Tobacco use can cause a host of serious health conditions, yet many individuals find it difficult to quit. Through our Tobacco Cessation program, we are hoping to motivate more people to stop.

We also feature a unique program we began in 2016 to address the issue of substance abuse in our region. Designed to identify and assist individuals struggling with addiction, it relies on the expertise of peer recovery coaches...individuals having personal experience with substance abuse...to provide them with the support and guidance they need to move toward recovery. In addition, we highlight some of our community outreach activities.

We hope you find this issue of Advancing Health informative, and welcome any input you may have as to how we can best meet the needs of the community in the years ahead. Working together, we can all live healthier lives.

In good health,

Bradley S. Chambers

Senior Vice President and Chief Operating Officer, MedStar Health, Baltimore Region

Learning to live without tobacco.

Free cessation classes help participants become smoke-free.

Many individuals who have been using tobacco for a while wonder if quitting is worth dealing with the cravings and withdrawal symptoms that come with it. They may think, "The damage is done, so does it really make a difference?"

According to Karen Polite-Lamma, MSN, CTTS, RN program manager, Population and Community Health for MedStar Health, Baltimore region, the answer is absolutely. "Your body has an amazing ability to heal itself, and it happens quicker than you think—less than half an hour after you put out that last cigarette," she says. "But you're more likely to succeed if you have a plan to quit. Counseling and the use of medications may also increase your chances of quitting."

Tobacco is the leading preventable cause of death in the United States. There is no safe level of exposure to tobacco. Smoking is the most harmful to a user's health and has been shown to cause cancer, heart disease, stroke, lung diseases, diabetes, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), and other health problems.

Reversing this trend by helping adults become tobacco-free is the goal of MedStar Health's free Tobacco Cessation program. "Currently, we offer 7 different group classes, both virtually and in-person, providing individuals who are ready to quit with a number of convenient options," Polite-Lamma says. "Classes are generally held over a 4- to 6-week period and are scheduled once a week for 1.5 to 2 hours."

Designed for individuals who are motivated to quit, classes focus on helping participants stop smoking as quickly as possible while teaching them techniques for ending the physical and psychological need to smoke. "Through our classes, participants gain a better understanding of why they smoke, learn how to handle withdrawal and stress, and are counseled on ways to resist the urge to smoke," she explains.

"Plus, quitting is hard! The use of medications such as nicotine replacement therapies (NRT)—nicotine gum, patches, inhalers, nasal sprays and lozenges, or pills—are safe and effective ways to relieve cravings and withdrawal symptoms to quit for good. If participants are interested, we can assist them in obtaining the appropriate medication," she adds.

"It's been proven that quitting smoking, no matter how long you've been using tobacco, does reduce your risk of smoking-related diseases and improves your health," says Polite-Lamma. "In fact, 5 years after quitting, the risk of a stroke or developing certain cancers decreases by almost half. People who quit smoking experience improved cardiovascular and lung function, which may mean lower blood pressure, less coughing, more energy, and enjoy a renewed sense of taste and smell. It's the single most important step you can take to improve the length and quality of your life."

Shining a light on the path to recovery.

Substance abuse is a public health crisis that has reached epidemic proportions nationally as well as in the Baltimore region. Individuals who have substance use disorders have more health complications, experience higher costs of care, and are admitted to the hospital more frequently than those not dealing with an addiction.

At MedStar Health, we have been working hard to address this problem since 2016 through our Screening, Brief Intervention, and Referral to Treatment program, also known as SBIRT. If an individual comes to us for care and is screened positive for substance use, one of our 24 hospital-based SBIRT peer recovery coaches—individuals who have personal experience with addiction—engage with that person, providing support, guidance, and a path to recovery.

A nationally recognized, evidence-based program, SBIRT is offered by MedStar Health at all four of our Baltimore hospitals: MedStar Franklin Square Medical Center, MedStar Good Samaritan Hospital, MedStar

Yvette Holloway, pictured left, provides non-judgmental support and resources to client Terry Pinkett in her role as a peer recovery coach at MedStar Good Samaritan.

Harbor Hospital, and MedStar Union Memorial Hospital. Initially launched in the hospitals' Emergency departments, it has since been expanded to several other units.

The peer recovery coaches are key to the success of the program, offering unique insight and valuable perspectives that are different from what is traditionally experienced in a clinical setting. Studies have shown that having guidance and support from someone who has "been there" is what many in recovery value the most. They also serve as mentors, and assist in completing referrals and promoting access to treatment services.

Yvette Holloway is the peer recovery coach team leader at MedStar Good Samaritan, and works in Outpatient Behavioral Health. Patients are referred to her for follow-up if they screen positive for drug or alcohol use during an appointment. She attempts to first gain their trust by explaining that earlier in her life, she was in their shoes.

"I made the decision to get help after ending up in jail as a result of my addiction," Holloway explains. "I've been in recovery for 22 years with the support of my pastor, family, sponsor, and friends, who gave me the tools I needed to conquer my addiction and acquire the strength to believe in myself. Now I use these same tools to motivate my clients. I'm both humbled by and proud of this work."

Betty Scott, the peer recovery coach team leader at MedStar Union Memorial, works with clients in the Emergency department as well as individuals in select inpatient units. "I've been in recovery now for over 6 years and realize how hard it is to get there. So, I know exactly what this walk is about," she says. "I am grateful for the opportunity to use my experience to help others struggling like I did. It's very rewarding."

Today, MedStar Health screens about 280,000 individuals annually through the SBIRT program with many moving on to recovery, thanks to the support of their peer recovery coaches.

Connecting with our community.

Population and Community Health teams throughout the Baltimore region are dedicated to connecting neighbors with programs and services. Whether it's providing health information about tobacco cessation, diabetes prevention, and mental health materials—printed in English and Spanish—or sharing resources that can help with food disparities, legal services, or housing, our teams are bringing support to your neighborhoods.

Below are some of our recent outreach events.

Yoga Class at Shepherd's Clinic and the Joy Wellness Center led by volunteer Julianna Smith. The facility offers integrative health and wellness services to patients of the clinic and to members of the community. MedStar Health is proud to partner with and support Shepherd's Clinic and the Joy Wellness Center.

The MedStar Health Care Transformation team partnered with the Loch Raven Improvement Association for the Lovin' Loch Raven community event on Saturday, Sept. 24 at Immanuel Lutheran Church. In addition to providing blood pressure screenings, MedStar Health also provided health education related to diabetes screening, tobacco cessation, stroke symptoms, use of the 988 Suicide and Crisis Lifeline, along with care navigation resources.

MedStar Health and the Baltimore Ravens have joined forces on the Purple Ticket to Health program that provides Ravens Flock members entry into a sweepstakes for completing free diabetes and body mass index (BMI) screenings. Through an online health questionnaire provided by MedStar Health, Ravens Flock members can participate and learn about preventive health practices throughout the Ravens 2022 season. Upon completion of the screening, members are eligible to win prizes and experiences provided by the Ravens.
